LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Listeners will be able to:

1. describe common orthodontic and orthotropic appliances available for dental expansion, growth, and alignment.
2. differentiate between appliances that can be utilized during treatment and those which require postponed therapy.
3. describe methods to determine whether tongue tip up or down is the correct placement for individual patients.
4. provide detailed and clinically applicable understanding of the freeway space and how it should be incorporated into therapy.
5. explain methods to improve communication skills in their personal and professional lives.
6. list a range of cultural and historical attitudes and representations of oral habits.
7. compare/contrast past and current treatment techniques for oral habits.
8. name two types of nasal airway problems and describe the importance of achieving a consistent patent nasal airway.
9. explain the importance of having an ENT and allergist on their team.
10. critically appraise research articles to determine their application to clinical practice.
11. identify lesser known features within the oral cavity.
12. explain how to deal with the ups and downs of business in a beneficial way.
